How it works

RIGHT NOW • FIRST 10 MINUTES

Stop. Breathe. Work through this list.

- 01 Get safe.
 Move off the carriageway if you can. Hazards on. If you can't move safely, stay put and wait for help.
- 02 Check yourself before the bike.
 Any pain in the neck, back, head or limbs — don't move, call 999. Adrenaline hides injuries; let someone trained make that call.
- 03 Note time, date, location.
 Exact postcode if you have it, or nearest junction, road name and landmark. Write it in your phone notes — memory drifts fast after a shock.
- 04 If a vehicle was involved, get five things.
 Driver's full name, mobile, vehicle registration, make/model, insurer. That's the minimum. Politely insist.
- 05 Don't admit fault. Don't apologise.
 Not even casually. "Sorry" can be quoted back to you. Stick to facts. Full breakdown on page 2.
- 06 Find witnesses before they leave.
 Anyone who saw it — pedestrians, drivers, shop staff. Name and phone number. Independent witnesses can decide a disputed claim.
- 07 Call the police if needed.
 Call 999 if anyone's hurt or the road is blocked; 101 if the other driver refuses details, leaves, or seems uninsured. Note the incident reference.

Can't do all this right now? If you're shaken or in pain, your phone is the only essential tool — call 999 first. Everything else can wait an hour. UK law gives you 3 years to start a claim; the next ten minutes don't have to be perfect.

EVIDENCE · PHOTOS

The 12 photos that win claims.

Phone out, take them all — even the obvious ones. Disputed claims are won and lost on what you have and what you don't.

TALKING · AT THE SCENE

What to say. What not to say.

SAY Facts & questions

- > "Are you okay? Are you hurt?"
- > "Can I get your name, number, reg and insurer?"
- > "Did anyone see what happened?"
- > "I need to speak to my insurer first."
- > "Let's exchange details, then we can both go."

DON'T Admit blame

- > "I'm so sorry" — even politely
- > "It was my fault" / "it was 50/50"
- > "Let's sort it without insurers"
- > "I didn't see you"
- > "I'm fine" if unsure — say "I'll get checked"

One golden rule: if the other driver pushes for a quick cash fix or talks you out of involving insurers, that's a flag. Politely insist on the standard process — they're often keeping something off their record.

NEXT 48 HOURS · DON'T SKIP THESE

The post-crash checklist.

01 See a GP or A&E if anything hurts.

Even mild pain. Get it on your medical record the same day — soft-tissue injuries don't X-ray but they show in notes.

02 Photograph bruising as it develops.

Bruises and stiffness often appear 24–48 hours later. Daily phone photos build the evidence trail.

03 Notify your insurer — don't claim yet.

You have a duty to report an incident. Reporting isn't claiming. Stick to facts; don't speculate on fault.

04 Don't repair, scrap or sell the bike.

It's evidence. Keep every receipt — A&E parking, taxi home, replacement gear — it's all recoverable.

05 Stay off social media about it.

Insurers and opposing solicitors will look. A "lucky to be alive" post can be twisted into "minor incident".

06 Get connected to a specialist — even if unsure.

First conversation is free, no obligation. Check what you're owed — UK law gives you 3 years, but evidence fades fast.

WHEN YOU'RE READY

You're owed more than you think.
